Consumer Usage:

Are you dreading the task of setting up your new PC? Research indicates that a majority of people will avoid buying a new PC because of the laborious task of setting it up. With each new PC, you have to find serial numbers and licenses for your old software applications, manually reinstall each one, or download your apps again (if you find those old emails) and rework each personalized setting.

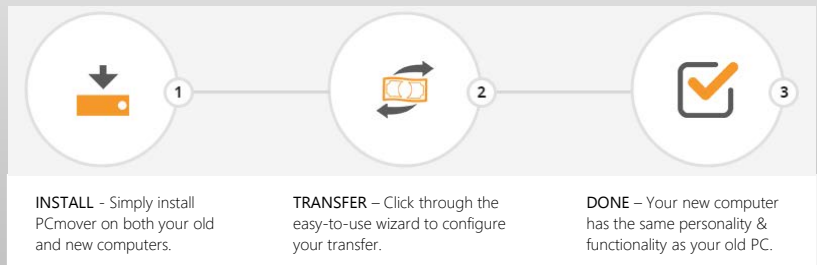

That's why there's PCmover. PCmover sets up your new PC automatically with just a wizard and a connection. In a matter of hours rather than days, your new PC will have all your applications, documents, and settings installed automatically. And the best part? PCmover can work completely unattended. Leave it running overnight and wake up to your brand new PC set up just the way you like it and ready to go.

Business Environments:

Every hour of lost productivity costs your business money, and when it takes a day or more for an employee to regain productivity after a computer upgrade, that affects your bottom line. If you're paying an IT professional to sit in front of each computer and migrate everything manually, that costs your business even more. In fact, that type of lost productivity is estimated to cost up to $300 per migration.

Thomas Koll, Chairman and CEO of Laplink Software is so confident of the savings experienced by businesses using PCmover that the volume licensing offers are also covered by a 30-day money-back guarantee.
